Lower Costs, Better Care: How Democrats' Health Bill Will Benefit West Virginians

House Democrats are taking concrete steps to reduce health care costs and improve care for millions, including those with health insurance through their employers, by introducing the Protecting Pre-Existing Conditions And Making Health Care More Affordable Act of 2019. By putting an upper limit on how much insurance can cost a family, expanding the number of middle class families who can get financial support, and other cost reduction programs, millions of Americans will see their premiums reduced.

The bill's extended eligibility for tax credits and reinsurance programs would cut premiums for ACA plans sold on the individual market, reducing premiums or deductibles for 13 million with current individual market coverage, including 29,700 in West Virginia, and creating lower cost options for 12 million uninsured people eligible for coverage, including 49,540 in West Virginia, through the marketplace.

How West Virginia Families Would Benefit From House Democrats' Plan:

Those who purchase health care in the marketplaces because they depend on the ACA for care or because their employer-sponsored plan is too expensive, could see the following savings:

A typical West Virginia family of four making $50,000 would pay $165 rather than $271 per month for benchmark coverage on a commonly purchased silver plan. Thanks to (existing) cost sharing assistance, the plans available to them have deductibles averaging about $850.

A typical West Virginia family of four making $75,000 would see their premiums fall by $178 per month. That would cut their premium for benchmark coverage by 29 percent, from $613 to $435 a month.

A typical West Virginia family of four making $110,000 would see their premiums fall by $1,127 per month. That would cut their premium for benchmark coverage by 59 percent, from $1,906 to $779 a month.

A typical 60-year-old in West Virginia making $50,000 would see their premiums fall by $913 per month. That would cut their premium for benchmark coverage by 72 percent, from $1,267 to $354 a month.

How The Plan Works:

Lower Health Care Costs. The House bill would reduce health care premiums and deductibles, expand eligibility for financial assistance that helps consumers afford coverage, and expand access to affordable health care by guaranteeing affordable care options.

- Coverage for less than ten percent of your income. Under the bill, nearly all Americans, including those with coverage through their employer, would be guaranteed an option to purchase health care for less than 10 percent of their income. The bill would let people with employer coverage whose premiums exceed 9.86 percent of their income to instead purchase individual market coverage with financial assistance.

- Financial assistance for more people. For the first time, premium tax credits would be made available to more middle class Americans buying coverage through the ACA, including those with incomes above 400 percent of the federal poverty line or roughly $100,400 for a family of four.
- Lowering premiums. By creating a national reinsurance program the House legislation would help further reduce premiums.

Better Care For More People. The bill would restrict insurance companies' ability to sell plans that gut circumvent important consumer protections. By helping to lower costs, the House bill would also expand access to comprehensive, affordable care for even more people.

- Lowering premiums for more than 29,700 West Virginians and making lower-cost options available to as many as 49,540 West Virginians. In all, the bill's extended tax credits, reinsurance programs and premium assistance would cut premiums for all ACA-compliant plans sold on the individual market, reducing premiums or deductibles for 13 million with individual market coverage and creating lower cost options for 12 million uninsured people eligible for coverage through the marketplace.
- Protecting 737,900 West Virginians with pre-existing conditions. The legislation would stop the Trump administration's plans to allow insurance companies to sell junk plans that deny people with pre-existing conditions coverage or charge them more.
- Guaranteeing that insurance companies cover basic health services. The bill would reverse the Trump administration's junk plans that do not require insurance companies to cover essential health benefits, such as prescription drug coverage, hospital care, and maternity coverage. Among junk plans offered in West Virginia, 41 percent exclude mental health coverage, 64 percent exclude substance use treatment, 68 percent exclude prescription drugs, and all exclude maternity care.
- Taking power away from insurance companies and gives it back to patients. While the Trump administration gives insurance companies the power to flood the market with junk plans and rewards them with massive tax breaks, this bill reinstates important protections for American consumers, giving power back to patients.

End Sabotage. Since taking office, the Trump administration has worked relentlessly to sabotage Americans' health care, expanding access to junk plans that allow insurance companies to deny coverage to patients with pre-existing conditions and slashing funding to help people sign up for comprehensive, affordable care.

- Restoring funding for education. The House bill would restore marketing funding for health care sold through the marketplace, which the Trump administration has cut by 90 percent since taking office.
- Restoring funding for groups that help people sign up for coverage. Funding for health navigator groups that help people sign up for comprehensive care would also be restored. This would restore funding for West Virginia groups, which have seen 83 percent funding cuts since 2016.
