Subject: Battleground Voters Show Health Care Can Cost Trump His Re-Election
Date: June 20, 2019
A new Public Policy Polling survey finds that an overwhelming majority of voters in battleground states (Florida, Pennsylvania, Michigan, and Wisconsin) would not consider voting for a presidential candidate who supports even one of the major pieces of Trump's agenda on health care - whether it be eliminating health care protections for people with preexisting conditions, cutting funding for Medicare, or letting let insurance companies stop covering the costs of prescription drugs. It's not just that they oppose the agenda, voters say they won't support a candidate who embraces it.

- If a candidate for President supports plans that let insurance companies stop covering the costs of prescription drugs, $77 \%$ of voters say they would not consider voting for them, with only $10 \%$ saying they would consider voting for such a candidate.
- $73 \%$ of voters say they would not consider voting for a candidate who proposes a budget that includes $$ 845$ billion in cuts to Medicare;
- $72 \%$ would not consider voting for a presidential candidate who supports plans that eliminate health care protections for people with preexisting conditions.

When forced to choose between the plans that eliminate protections for people with preexisting conditions, voters have a higher opinion of being stuck in traffic (47-27), used car salesmen (45-25), and cockroaches (42-28).

Across these key battleground states, the data reveals that Trump would lose - even to the worst villains imaginable - if the Presidential race was defined about his health care agenda. Voters would prefer a Zombie who supports health care over Trump who will repeal it by 4 points (46-42) and prefer Dracula who supports health care over Trump who will repeal it by 4 points (46-42). If the election were defined as about health care, Trump only ties his opposition if it's Attila the Hun (42-42).

A majority (52\%) of voters trust also trust Democrats more than President Trump on healthcare, with only $43 \%$ of voters trusting President Trump more. Among independents, $59 \%$ trust Democrats more, and only $36 \%$ of independents trust President Trump.

PPP surveyed 687 voters from Florida, Michigan, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin from June $17-18,2019$. The margin of error is +/- $3.7 \%$. The survey was conducted by telephone and behalf of Protect Our Care.
