Subject: Health Care a Critical Issue in Georgia Senate Races, Leading to Key Democratic Victories

Date: January 19, 2021

A new Public Policy Polling survey finds that health care was a critical issue to the Democratic victories in the Georgia Senate races on January 5th. A majority (63%) of voters consider health care either the most important or a very important issue when they decided who to support in the Senate elections.

Voters also trusted the Democratic candidates, Raphael Warnock and Jon Ossoff, more than Republicans Kelly Loeffler and David Perdue on the issue of health care by a 9-point margin: 50% trusted Democrats, while just 41% trusted Republicans. A further 68% of Georgians say they will be disappointed if Warnock and Ossoff fail to deliver on health care promises made during their campaigns.

Key findings from the survey include:

- 80% of voters surveyed who supported Ossoff and 79% who supported Warnock say health care was either the most important or a very important issue in deciding which candidate to support. Meanwhile, just 44% of Perdue voters and 45% of Loeffler voters say health care was a key issue in deciding their vote.
- Health care is a critical issue among a large majority of African-American voters: 85% who supported Warnock and Ossoff say health care was either the most important or a very important issue in deciding their vote for Senate.
- 54% of independents surveyed say they trusted Warnock and Ossoff more on the issue of healthcare, compared to just 23% who trusted Loeffler and Perdue more. Meanwhile, 55% of these independents say they voted for Warnock and 57% voted for Ossoff.

Public Policy Polling surveyed 840 Georgia voters on behalf of Protect Our Care from January 13-14, 2021. The margin of error is +/- 3.4%. 50% of interviews for the survey were conducted by telephone and 50% by text message.
